

Malta High-Frequency Switching Power Supply 220V Customs Declaration

Article Overview

High-frequency switching power supplies imported into Malta require proper HS code classification, potential import authorization, and a completed customs declaration.

HS Code Classification

High-frequency switching power supplies are generally classified under HS codes 85044090 or 85044095, which cover static converters and AC/DC or DC/DC power converters used in industrial or electronic applications . Correct classification is essential for customs clearance and determining any applicable duties or restrictions.

Import Licensing Requirements

Certain electronic goods may require an import license issued by the Trade Services and Projects Directorate under the Importation Control Regulations (Legal Notice 242 of 2004), . Whether a license is needed depends on the product type and the country of origin. Applications are submitted via the Malta Import/Export Web Portal using an e-ID login. The process involves consultation with relevant authorities, and the license is issued once approval is confirmed.

Customs Declaration Process

For items entering Malta, a customs declaration must be completed. Maltese customs now use electronic forms through the e-Forms platform, which requires an e-ID acc...
