

Manufacturer of complete electrical distribution box equipment

Article Overview

Leading manufacturers of electrical distribution boxes include Wieland, JEAN MÜLLER, INDU-ELECTRIC, and numerous specialized German producers.

Key Manufacturers and Their Offerings

Wieland Electric specializes in decentralized and pluggable distribution boxes suitable for buildings, industrial plants, and smart building applications. Their products support energy, signal, and data distribution, and comply with IEC 61439 and IEC 61535 standards, ensuring high reliability and flexibility in harsh environments. JEAN MÜLLER offers a wide range of enclosures and distribution boards, including service entrance boxes, low-voltage distribution boards, and cable distribution cabinets. Their products can be supplied empty for custom installations or fully equipped, with in-house components and compliance with DIN EN 61439/DIN 43629 standards. INDU-ELECTRIC provides customized power distribution units (PDUs) for both stationary and mobile applications. Their portfolio includes wall-mounted units, portable sub-distribution boxes, and compact endpoint solutions. Each unit is tailored to technical and mechanical requirements, suitable for extreme conditions and high-capacity applications. Other German Manufacturers can be found through B2B directories, including companies like DynaTrade, QTM Automatisierung, H&N Energien, and LTT, which offer specialized solutions for industrial power distribution, high-current systems, and mobile or stationary electrical installations.
