

Price of indoor electrical distribution boxes in hotels

Article Overview

Indoor electrical distribution boxes for hotels typically range from $150 to $1,500 per unit, depending on capacity, features, and customization.

Cost Overview

The price of indoor distribution boxes in hotels varies widely based on specifications, capacity, and integrated features. Standard commercial-grade units for hotel rooms generally start around $150-$300 for basic single-phase systems with a few circuits, while more advanced units with multiple circuits, energy-saving automation, and smart monitoring can cost $800-$1,500 or more per unit. High-end systems designed for luxury hotels or large-scale installations may include pluggable modules, DIN rail MCBs, and room automation integration, which increases the cost.

Factors Affecting Price

- Number of Circuits and Capacity: More circuits and higher amperage ratings increase the cost, as they require larger enclosures and more protective devices.
- Energy-Saving and Automation Features: Hotel-specific systems, such as key-card controlled power distribution, allow selective activation of room loads and can save up to 50% in energy consumption, adding to the upfront cost.
- Material and Protection Class: Indoor-rated boxes with higher IP protection or fire-resistant materials are more expensive than basic enclosures.
- Customization and Integration: Units that integrate with building management systems, lighting, HVAC, or smart monitoring features are priced higher due to addi...
